2.9 Information Relating to Islamic (Swap-Free) Accounts

We collect and process it only to assess your eligibility for a Swap-Free Account and to administer that Account, on the basis of your explicit consent or another lawful basis where one is available to us. We do not ordinarily require a certificate, letter from a religious authority, or other official proof of religion.

Access to this information is restricted to staff who need it for that purpose. We retain it only for as long as necessary for Swap-Free Account eligibility and administration, and for any period required by applicable law. We do not use it for marketing or profiling, or for any other purpose.

You may withdraw your consent at any time by contacting us. If you do, we will stop processing this information for eligibility purposes, which may mean the Account can no longer be maintained as a Swap-Free Account.

4.5 Risk Management

The Company implements internal risk management procedures to ensure the integrity of its trading environment, prevent financial crime, and protect both the Client and the Company.

Such procedures may include, but are not limited to:

- Monitoring trading activity and account behavior
- Detecting and preventing abusive trading practices, fraud, or market manipulation
- Identifying unusual or suspicious transactions or patterns
- Applying trading limits, margin controls, and leverage restrictions
- Reviewing account activity for compliance with the Company's policies and applicable regulations

- Cancelling trades, adjusting pricing, or reversing transactions in cases of technical errors, abuse, or violation of terms

The Client acknowledges and agrees that the Company reserves the right to take any reasonable action deemed necessary to manage risk and maintain a fair and orderly trading environment.

4.6 Automated Decision-Making

The Company operates automated controls that act on your account without human involvement at the time they act. These controls are described in full in the Client Agreement.

Depending on the applicable rule, an automated control may reject or delay an order you submit, cancel your pending orders, close or partially close your open positions, prevent you from modifying or closing a protected position, disable trading on your account, or lock your account until a specified time.

These controls process and use your account data, including account equity and balance, funding records, open and pending Order details, instrument, volume, Order and position profit or loss, and timestamps recorded against the relevant trading server, together with the risk-control settings applied to or selected for your account.

Depending on the applicable rule, the controls may also use market data, including price quotes, candle or bar data such as open, high, low, and close values, applicable timeframes, and technical-indicator inputs or calculated values used to evaluate rules such as MA Direction and Candle Direction. Some controls also use scheduled economic-event data obtained from third-party market-data providers.

Each rule evaluates the applicable data using the instrument, timeframe, parameters, direction settings, and evaluation method displayed in the Client Portal.

We do this to perform our contract with you, where you have enabled an optional control, and for our legitimate interests in managing the Company's own risk exposure and maintaining the integrity of the trading environment.

An automated control can close positions and restrict trading on your account, and this may result in a financial loss. These controls do not eliminate trading risk and are not a guarantee that a loss will be limited.

You may request a review of any automated action through the complaints procedure set out in the Client Agreement. The action will be reviewed by a person, not by the same automated system, and we will respond to you with the outcome.
